The Disability Interactive Process

Engaging in the interactive process can be daunting. This workshop will prepare you for the interactive process by covering the full range of issues and obligations employers face when trying to reasonably accommodate employees with disabilities. Topics include:

- What qualifies as a disability?
- What disability related information may be acquired by employers?
- What is required by the interactive process?
- What is meant by “reasonable accommodation”?
- How does the interactive process relate to other laws?
- How do disability retirement laws impact the interactive process?

The workshop includes realistic examples of workplace situations, comprehensive case studies, and a simulated interactive process to facilitate audience participation.
